BUSINESS INTELLIGENCE…INFORMATION MANAGEMENT

Many companies today find that they are data rich and information poor. Organizations have many transaction systems generating data, but they are challenged in turning their valuable asset, data, into actionable information.
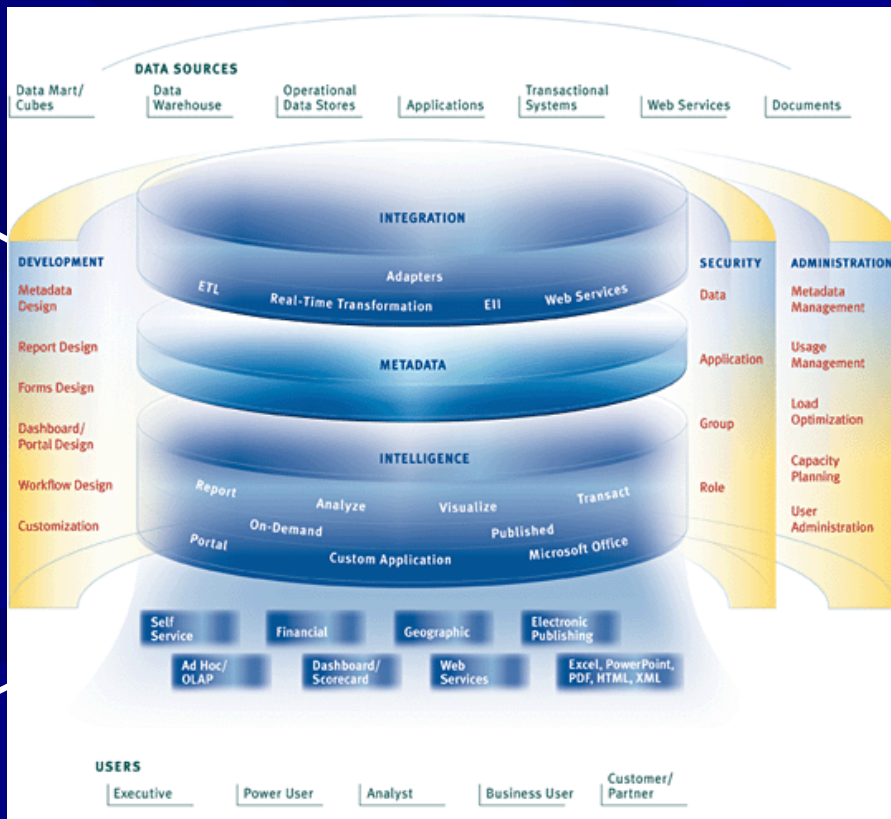

To address this hurdle many clients have made investments in their information delivery methods that have been instituted through several initiatives, both currently and near future. These initiatives have focused on improved accessibility, availability, and distribution of data, Key Performance Indicators (KPI), as well as maximizing data assets for improved and quicker deployment of new products. These goals all rely on a sound foundation of information engineering best practices that defines a direction for the usage of data throughout the enterprise, whether for operational purposes, reporting, business analytics, or regulatory compliance such as Basel II or Sarbanes Oxley.

Business Intelligence and Information Management Consulting Services: Over many years, MTT Associates has built upon experience in information engineering, specifically, Business Intelligence, data warehouse architecture, information fusion, database design, implementation and deployment and database management and administration.

MTT Associates provides Business Intelligence and Information Management services to assist clients in implementing solutions to exploit their data assets. These solutions focus on protecting our clients' organizational investment in information assets and for future ease of management, consistency, and integrity of data. It is imperative that an organization define and employ sound information services which insures that data appropriately supports and expedites the information needs of the business.
